HUSK THE RICE BY HAND

Methods in Use in Burma Are Susceptible of Improvement, According to American Ideas.

The most popular method used by the Burmese for husking rice is by the "chike-set" or revolving mill, which is worked by hand. This mill is made of woven bamboo. The lower half is stationary, with a cone shaped head of hardwood and bamboo extending within the upper half, which revolves around this cone when pushed backward and forward by means of the handle. Hard bamboo twigs extending crosswise in the upper portion husk the rice against the cone. Between the two sections is a small opening through which the rice falls into a plate or basket.

The other method is by a wooden mortar, the pestle consisting of a block of wood at the end of a heavy bar working on a lever, which is raised and lowered by the weight of the operator's body as he steps on and off the further end of the bar. These machines are manufactured locally.

There is no doubt a considerable market in Burma for small rice machines capable of handling two hundred baskets per day of twelve hours, costing c. i. f. Rangoon about $80. The basket is the unit of measure in the rice trade of Burma and consists of forty-seven pounds unhusked rice or seventy-five pounds cleaned white rice. The machine must be provided with separators and three outshoots, i. e., for white rice, coodite and husk.

PEOPLE SHOW APPRECIATION.

The officers and members of all the organizations interested in the Memorial hall, now almost completed, want to express their appreciation of the donations now coming to hand from parties outside the village. Five dollars each from Peter Baugher and Zeloo Cleveland and others of smaller amounts. The people ought to be interested and contribute liberally for there is to be a rest room, toilet, etc., a benefit to all, something the village has never had.

Let the good work go on.

Calumet Guarantees Baking Economy.

Have you ever stopped to think just what "economy" in baking really means? Some folks seem to have the idea that saving a little on the cost of the materials—the flour, eggs, etc.—is economy. Others are of the opinion that they have been economical when they buy the low priced baking powder and save 10c to 25c. But both are wrong. For the real economy—the economy that counts—consists in doing away with the failures that so often waste far more than is saved in buying low-priced materials.

And that beyond a doubt is the reason that Calumet Baking Powder is the favorite of millions of cooks. It absolutely prevents failures and guarantees success, which in the end is the same thing as economy.

Calumet is unfailing—it makes every baking good—more tasty, more delicious, more evenly raised—simply because it is not only pure and wholesome itself—but so uniform in quality that you can always depend upon it. Two World's Pure Food Expositions—one at Chicago in 1907, and the other at Paris, France, in 1912—have officially pronounced Calumet the best baking powder made.

Card of Thanks.

We extend our sincerest thanks to the friends and neighbors who did so much to brighten the last days of our dear one, who enjoyed so much the companionship of her friends. Those who brought her beautiful flowers and dainties to tempt her failing appetite, can hardly know how much they were appreciated and enjoyed by her who is gone.
